Snyder lives his dream on 'Price is Right'

By RON LANDFRIED
The Herald-Sun

Since he was a youngster, Kevin Snyder has yearned to hear his name called, followed by these words, intoned in a booming voice brimming with enthusiasm: "COME ON DOWN!"

The 1994 Northern High School graduate knows his fascination with the daytime game show "The Price is Right" is a little odd, but he's unapologetic. He has written a paper on the psychology of the show and even skipped his college graduation to take a shot at an appearance. Alas, host Bob Barker was sick that day.

But Snyder, now 23, was not to be denied. Last month he heard the words, shared the stage with the white-haired, perpetually tanned host and did pretty well. At 11 a.m. Wednesday on CBS, viewers can watch Snyder's dream come true.

"I know it's crazy," he said. "People made fun of me. ... I told them, you just wait."

He owes some of his success to his fraternity brothers at Delta Tau Delta. Snyder is a true-blue Delta. Even now, post-graduation, he works for the fraternity as a consultant. Ten fellow Deltas, either sharing his obsession or just along for the fun, joined him at the California studio where, wearing T-shirts that said "The Price is Right." They waited in line all day.

"They put you through a screening process," Snyder said. "The group I was with was committed to plugging me. I said I missed my college graduation and drove 6,000 miles just for the chance to be on the show."

"I never had a college class at 11 a.m. I wrote a paper on the show when I was a freshman. What I realized is that that it is one of the most popular game shows because you can live through the contestants. A teacher praised the paper. She said, 'You're weird, come and see me.' The magnitude of his desire to be on the show must have been apparent. Soon, Snyder was on stage with Barker.

"Bob is old and fragile, but he's still the man," Snyder said of the 75-year-old host. "The show's been going on for 29 years strong."

"There is actually a strategy to the game," Snyder said. "The prices there are so expensive. You have to know that ... Spending time in a grocery store isn't going to help you."

So Snyder won some preliminary prizes and then used his strategy when asked to guess the price of a diamond bracelet.

Sensing that everyone else had underbid, he guessed $1,550. The actual price was $1,625. Then he spun the big wheel and racked up another prize — $1.

His wild 20 minutes of fame were over.

"He always liked 'The Price is Right,'" his mother, Barbara Snyder, recalled. "I never watched a show with him when he didn't win every game. There's something wrong when a 21-year-old knows the price of Preparation H and Dentu Creme."

"I lived my dream," Snyder said. "It's cool to be able to say that — even though it's weird."

Will his life be all downhill now that his dream has come true? Yes, in a way. Snyder says his new pursuit will be skydiving.
